I want to live my life knowing that I have given all of me to sowing seeds in the life of people.

Purpose

Purpose

My purpose as a seed-tender, beacon and believer involves many things and are in many ways intertwined. The seed-tender must be a believer in the seed's potential and must like a beacon be able to guide the seed's growth. The seeds I tend to often come in the form of people and brands. As a tender of both, I do not just see them as they are now, but as they can be. My mission is to help them see it too and gently prod them towards that future.

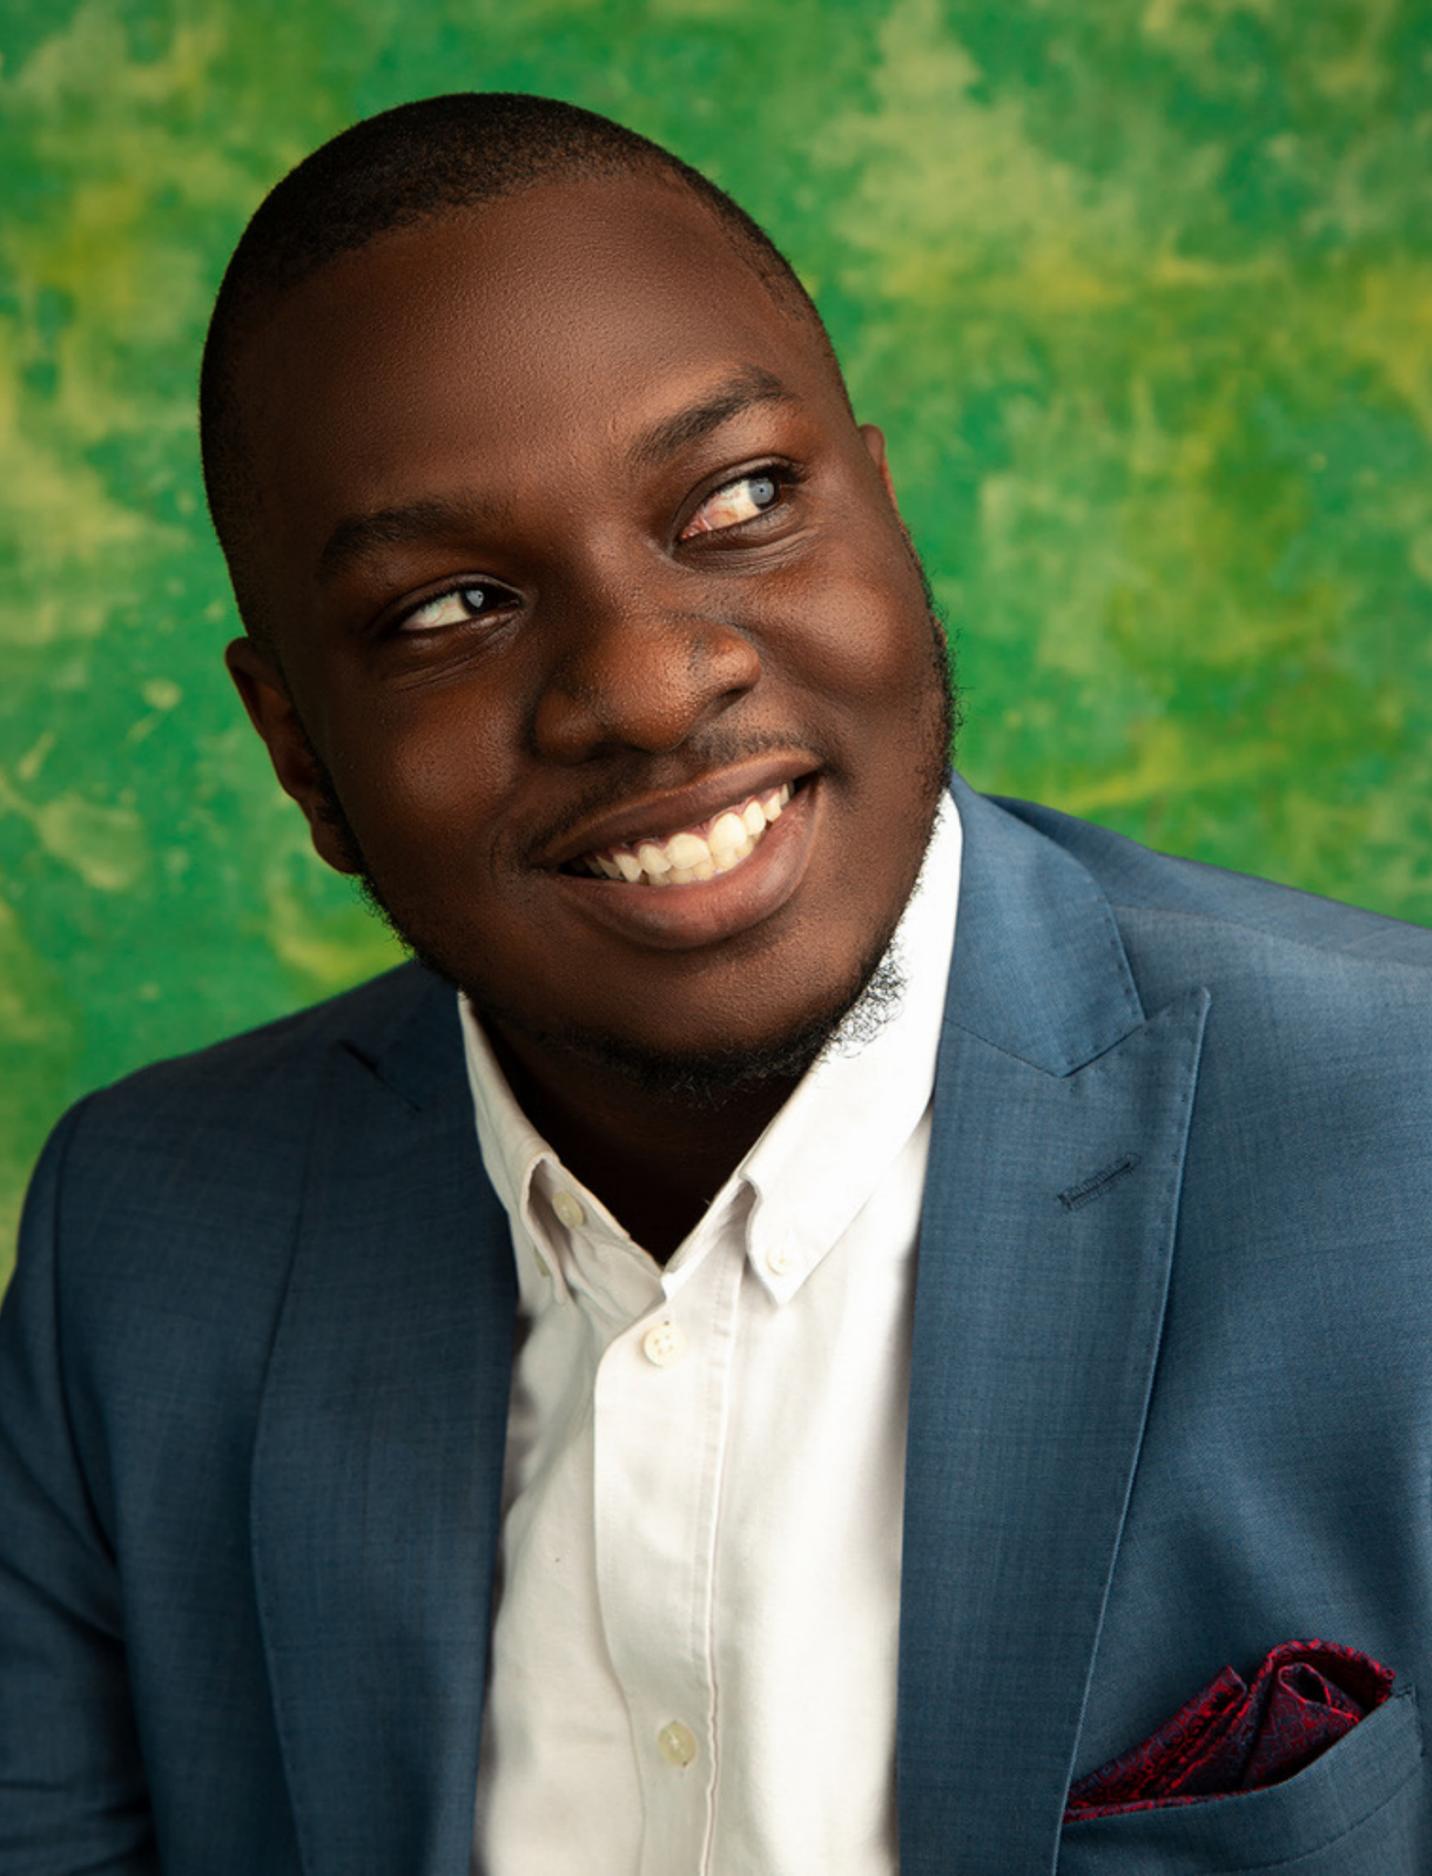

My firm understanding of my purpose means I'm very deliberate about the causes, organisations and initiative I drive or contribute to. My intention is to sow seeds in the form of words and actions, everywhere I go so that people and brands can use those seeds to access the greatness that is inherent in them.

My Bio

Oluwanifemi Aikomo is many things that are best described, not defined. He has been able to nurture people and brands to their full potential. Hence why he describes himself as seed tender. Some of the brands he has tended to include as a marketing professional include AVA energy UK, Motley Inspires, Union Bank, Seplat and Giant group. His purpose is to sow seed everywhere he goes so that people can use those seeds to access the greatness that is inherent in them. He has been able to serve in this capacity as the founder of Motley inspires - a leadership coaching outfit focused on helping millennials and Gen Zers find clarity and set a path towards their desired future. As a beacon, his goal is to point others towards the right path by being an example. This led him to start the Boys to Men initiative, which aims to change the negative narrative about men by targeting high school boys and teaching them important life skills. The Life Skills Curriculum is an intricate part of the Boys to Men initiative that helps develop young boys and imbibe in them a value system that guarantees they turn out to be wholesome members of society. Some of the critical skills taught are critical thinking, communication, decision making, goal setting, problem-solving.

Oluwanifemi Aikomo is also an unrepentant optimist and as such tends to see the best in people and country and as such that makes “Believer” an apt way to describe this side of him. This can be seen in his volunteering efforts at purpose-driven organisations such as Slum to school - where he serves as the team lead, electronic media - Man Up initiative where he serves as the team lead, events and marketing - and Hey Girl Africa -where he serves as the marketing team lead.

The world is a better place when we all give back

My passion for young people led me to start up Motley inspires and the Boys to Men initiative. It is easy to call myself the founder of these two initiatives, but in actual fact, these initiatives found me. Motley inspires is a leadership coaching outfit focused on helping millennials and Gen Zers find clarity and set a path towards their desired future. Motleylânspires has worked with several organisations such as Republicom, Image and time, TechPlus, Slum2School and Connect marketing. Our leadership programs help organisations gain clarity, improve communication and collaboration, create a culture that retains talent and achieve organizational goals and objectives.

The Boys to Men initiative was created with the aim of changing the negative narratives about men by catching them young. The initiative targets young high school boys. The Life Skills Curriculum is an intricate part of the Boys to Men initiative that helps develop young boys and imbibe in them a value system that guarantees they turn out to be wholesome members of society.

An Epitome of Joy and Laughter

Profession

I have worked on brands such as AVA Energy UK, Motley Inspires, Union Bank, Seplat and Giant group.

My role as a Marketing and Communications Professional on these brands involved strategy, content creation, digital marketing, account management and so much more. I have worked on both the agency and brand side and this means I am able to draw from my different experiences to help brands reach their fullest potential.

However, my favourite brands to work on are everyday people. People and brands are similar in so many ways, which is why I often see them as one and the same.

Volunteering

The best way to find yourself is to lose yourself in the service of others.

— Mahatma Gandhi

The “believer” in me often drives me towards purpose-driven causes and organisations that are people-focused and centred. I currently volunteer at 3 different NGOs in different capacities. At Slum 2 school, I volunteer as the Team Lead, Electronic Media. This puts me in charge of telling the Slum2School story via Radio, Television channels. In the last few months, my team and I have been able to consistently use these platforms to tell the stories of our kids and raise money to put more kids into school. I also work in the Mentorship team as the Sub-Team Lead.

At Hey Girl Africa, I am responsible for helping the Foundation achieve its marketing goals as the Marketing Team Lead of a small but effective team.

At ManUp initiative, I volunteer as the Team lead, Events and marketing and Team Lead, Curriculum Development. This puts me in charge of crafting strategies for all marketing teams, including digital, advertising, communications and creative, as well as planning all events.
